To siges the bier of error's child. And make his grave where the lizards hide, Where night-shade strews the swamp creek's side, Far out of sight-where gentle Spring Shall send no gentle birds to sing. His old inck-knife lay with him low. That cut the string of Cupid's bow; The sad house cat shall whine around His lonely grave to grief profound.

ere, where shall fall no pllying eye For him-fer him no loving heart Shall ache-for him no tear shall start His old jack-knife shall waste with rust; He whom we hide from light of men, Shall never fright the babes again. For we have laid him from the light, Beneath the ground and out of sight; But this rude epitaph shall stand-

"He who to no one gave his hand?" BACKBONE.

To dress and walk genteely. To bow with casy grace, To speak in accents soft and mealy. To wear a suited face-These and like goodly gifts and grace But what we want in this soft are. Is bone, backbone.

A heart to feel, a mind to think, Despite each base control, A tongue to speak, a hand to work The purpose of the soul-By these and other goodly tokens It may be surely known If this, or that, without his body Has bone, backbone.

THE SINGING PREACHER.

Rev. Mr. - of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is a charming singer. He tells a capital joke at his own expense .-On one occasion, just after he had been placed upon a new circuit, in riding to an appointment, he overtook a venerable negro jogging along in the same direction, when the following colleguy took place between them:
